Cllr Philip Glanville, Mayor Jules Pipe, Postmaster Chandrakant Patel and Cllr Clayeon McKenzie at the official handover of Murray Grove Post Office

Stamp of approval

A HACKNEY Post Office has been returned to the main postal network thanks to a Council-backed campaign, local community support and new investment.

Murray Grove Post Office, in Hoxton, has received over £250,000 from the Council to stay open over the past five years. During this time, Postmaster Chandrakant Patel has improved services to meet growing customer demand.

The success has made it possible to hand Murray Grove back to Post Office Ltd to create a modern branch, with longer opening hours and increased services.

It will now offer bill payment, banking, benefits, postage, home-shopping returns, Local Collect, car tax and a selection of on-demand holiday money.

Mrs Bennett, who has

“It’s heart-warming to see this local branch, facing closure some five years ago, becoming a success story”

A cake to celebrate the branch rejoining the postal network lived in the borough since 1951, said: “The Post Office is a godsend. It’s so close for local people who can’t walk further.”

Helen, a resident of 45 years, added: “The Post Office has everything I need from my pension to stamps. It’s also a place where local people can meet, it’s a community place. The staff are friendly and so helpful.”

This latest chapter in the story of the Murray Grove branch follows its closure in 2008 as part of a Post Office money saving programme. It reopened in 2010, with Council funding, after a hard-fought community campaign.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, who spoke at the official handover event on 27 November, said: “It’s heart-warming to see this local branch, facing closure some five years ago, becoming the success story it is today with the continued support of the local community, businesses and the Council. Now part of Post Office Ltd, residents can continue to carry out necessary daily tasks on their doorstep for the many years to come.”

Postmaster Patel, who also runs Murrays Chemist from the same premises, added: “I was delighted to unveil the new style branch and I am very pleased to be officially launching it today for the community.”

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing; and Hoxton West ward councillor, Clayeon McKenzie, were also in attendance at the relaunch.

Update on baths

Residents were invited to give their views on how they would like to see the Grade II listed Haggerston Baths building developed

NEARLY 400 people have responded to a survey about the future of the Grade II listed Haggerston Baths.

The Council sought expressions of interest in the 111-year-old building, in June, attracting 29 bids from a range of individuals, firms and developers.

Residents were then invited to give their views on how they would like to see the building developed, by answering eight questions formulated by the Save Haggerston Pool campaign group and the Council.

A total of 86 per cent of respondents felt it very important that a public swimming pool is reinstated in the building. Other popular, alternative uses, included a community space, a cafe or restaurant, and arts and cultural venue. The majority of respondents felt it was important to bring the building back into use for aesthetic and heritage reasons.

The survey results have been passed on to the bidders to help them refine their formal propositions, which were submitted to the Council on 27 November, and they will also inform the Council's decision-making process.

Hackney is seeking to redevelop the site in light of the baths' annual £100,000 approximate upkeep, which covers maintenance and security for the empty building. It is estimated that it will cost around £25million to make the building safe and bring it back into public use – something the Council cannot prioritise in view of ongoing government budget cuts.

News in brief

London Fields filtering scheme meeting on 14 December

A MEETING is being held about the Council's proposed London Fields filtering scheme after an earlier event had to be cancelled because the venue was too small to fit in everyone who turned up.

The proposals could see 16 residential junctions around London Fields closed to motor vehicle through traffic from January for a three month trial.

The proposals have provoked strong reaction from residents, both for and against, and the meeting will be an opportunity for councillors and officers to answer questions and concerns from the public about the scheme. The three-month trial aims to end 'rat-running' in the area and improve conditions for pedestrians and cyclists by blocking roads to through traffic.

The meeting is set to take place on 14 December, at 7pm, in Hackney Town Hall Assembly Rooms. Those unable to attend can read frequently asked questions at: www.hackney.gov.uk/traffic-management.htm#London-Fields. Further questions can be e-mailed to: andy.cunningham@hackney.gov.uk

Improvement to repairs line

HACKNEY Homes' tenants and leaseholders should see improvements to the Repairs Contact Centre, after residents experienced problems in resolving repair queries and long waits for calls to be answered.

The Council and Hackney Homes have been working to improve the service and recruited new members of staff to start next month, ensuring the contact centre is fully staffed from 8am to 7pm, Monday to Friday.

At least half of the new staff are local people, brought in through the Council's Ways into Work team.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, said:

"I want to apologise unreservedly and assure tenants and leaseholders that we are working to make rapid improvements to the Repairs Contact Centre in time for the cold winter months when demand goes up sharply. There is still a way to go, but things are definitely moving in the right direction."

Speaker's gala raises over £12.5K for charities

MORE than £12,500 was raised for three local charities thanks to the generosity of guests at the Speaker of Hackney's annual dinner gala.

Business owners, mayors from across London, councillors and guests came together for the fundraising celebration on 6 November, with the money divided between the Speaker's chosen charities: Hackney Food Bank, Immediate Theatre, and Hestia, an organisation that helps survivors of domestic abuse and their families rebuild their lives.

Some of the fabulous raffle prizes donated were a Ted Baker leather laptop bag; dinner for two at Yum Yum restaurant in Stoke Newington; a box at the Hackney Empire's pantomime; tea for two at the House of Commons; and a £50 gift voucher from Paper Dress Vintage. In total, £12,679.74 was raised through ticket sales and raffle tickets.

Entertainment on the night at the Assembly Rooms, in Hackney Town Hall, included Gary Graceland as Elvis and a disco with DJ Fiona Meeks.

The Speaker, Cllr Sade Etti, said: "I am overwhelmed with the generosity of people who donated to my nominated charities. It was amazing to see so many faces attend and take part in this annual gala dinner. Thank you to all of the organisations and others that supported this event."

And all that jazz

FOUR hundred and fifty young people taking to the stage and performing everything from chamber music to R&B, via bell-ringing and jazz, can only mean one thing: the return of the annual Mayor's Music Awards.

The awards are part of Hackney Learning Trust's Music Service Annual Gala, which celebrates the achievements of the most talented music students in the borough. This year, the show at Hackney Empire featured bands, youth choirs, string groups and jazz ensembles.

The awards, established three years ago, are designed to identify aspiring

“It is clear that Hackney's reputation as the creative heart of London is in safe hands with all of you”

young musicians, and fund and support them as they develop their abilities.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: “We want to celebrate, encourage and enable young people to develop these talents, and I am determined that someone's financial situation should not be a barrier to this.”

The awards fall into four categories. Recognition for ‘musical achievement in instrumental learning’ went to Romola Goldfarb, from Betty Layward Primary School, and Mawule Adje, from Petchey Academy.

Romola, 10, said: “I can't lie, it was one of the best nights of my life, ever. I still can't believe it. When Jules Pipe said my name, I thought, ‘huh?’ and according to my friend I looked like a smiling zombie when I walked onto the stage. I feel like I can do anything now.”

The ‘certificate of acknowledgement’, for a school's musical curriculum went to The Bridge Academy, and Daubeney Primary School.

‘Excellence in music education practice’ was awarded to Sir Thomas Abney School, and Mossbourne Community Academy.

An instrument purchasing fund, designed to develop an ensemble group, was split between Southwold primary, Sir Thomas Abney and The Urswick schools.

Mayor Pipe added: “It is clear that Hackney's reputation as the creative heart of London is in safe hands with you.”

'It's all part of one weird feeding frenzy'

Author Tom McCarthy, who has twice been shortlisted for the Man Booker Prize, discusses art, philosophy and literature

By Harriet Worsley

I ALWAYS wanted to be a writer," says novelist Tom McCarthy. Adding: "As a child I would borrow a neighbour's typewriter and make up my own plots to Shakespeare plays. When I got stuck, I'd copy bits from the original. Which I later found out, of course, is pretty much how Shakespeare treated his own sources."

Writing is something McCarthy can do very well: his two most recent novels have both been shortlisted for the Man Booker Prize: 'C' (2001) and 'Satin Island' (2015.) His first novel, 'Remainder' has also just been made into a film.

Sat in the Hackney studio where he writes while his wife, visual artist Eva Stenram, works too, McCarthy is discussing his busy schedule.

Just last month, he attended the Booker prize finalists' party (won by Marlon James for his novel 'A Brief History of Seven Killings') as well as two film premiers for 'Remainder'.

Tom's diary difficulties aside, October was a month to make the UK's major publishing houses blush. Because back in 2001, when Tom first sent his book out, it was almost universally rejected.

In the end an obscure art house publisher in Paris printed a tiny edition in 2005. It attracted a cult following, which led to a second imprint by Alma Books in London.

This then garnered the attention of the editor-in-chief of Vintage Books in the US. When McCarthy joined their list, he became something of a global literary star.

By that stage, however, Tom had tried a lot of jobs in a lot of cities, including

“London was starting to feel like somewhere that things were really happening... and East London was the epicentre”

'nude modelling and bar work in Prague and book reviewing and kitchen work in Amsterdam'.

After graduating from New College, Oxford, he moved to Prague.

"I went wherever things were cheap and happening," he explains. In the early 1990s, that was the Czech Republic in the aftermath of the Velvet Revolution.

He says: "I had a dirt cheap apartment. I was writing and reading and taking in what was happening. At that point, Prague was a utopia and there was excitement in the air. The playwright Vaclav Havel was running the country. You'd go to a club and the drummer, standing there with a spliff in his mouth, would be the minister of culture."

Tom's third book, 'Men in Space', is set in this world. Though published second, in 2007, it was in fact written first, before the writer moved on to Berlin and Amsterdam, returning to London in 1996.

"I was editing Mute Magazine in Shoreditch, and by then, London was starting to feel like somewhere that things were really happening. The digital and tech industries were just beginning, and East London was the epicentre of all the change. Half of the YBAs [Young British Artists] were based in the same building as our magazine," he says.

In the late 1990s, he founded the International Necronautical Society, an art group he describes as 'semi-fictional'.

"My art projects are really literary projects, they just take place in a gallery space instead of on the pages of a book," he explains.

After his latest novel 'Satin Island' was published at the beginning of this year, he created an installation of the protagonist's office in the Institute of Contemporary Art.

Tom says: "You could wander around and read his books, step into and touch a work of fiction."

He also writes literary, philosophy and art criticism, including a book published in 2006 called 'Tintin and the Secret of Literature', and he has just been appointed visiting professor at the Royal College of Art.

Writing, teaching, making art... It may sound like a lot of disparate pursuits for one man but, says Tom: "They are all connected, each one helps me get on with the other. It's all part of one weird feeding frenzy."

Reach for the stars

Hackney schools have done well in two separate award schemes for promoting greener travel in the borough

HACKNEY schools have been given two separate accolades for promoting greener travel.

Transport for London's STARS (Sustainable Travel: Active, Responsible, Safe) awards encourage children, parents and teachers to adopt better ways of travelling to school through reducing car use, increasing walking and cycling, and encouraging more responsible behaviour when using public transport.

Tawhid Boys School, in Stoke Newington; Gayhurst Community School, in London Fields; Jubilee Primary School, in Stoke Newington; St Scholastica's Primary School, in Clapton; and Sir Thomas Abney

Primary School, in Stamford Hill were all deemed to be some of the best in London for promoting safe and active travel to school.

Usman Mapara, Headteacher of Tawhid Boys School, which picked up the best East London secondary school award, said: "This demonstrates our commitment to promoting sustainable travel and developing youngsters in becoming responsible, healthy citizens."

Gayhurst Community

School won the excellence for cycling award; Jubilee received the excellence for walking award; St Scholastica's took home the pupil-led excellence award; and Sir Thomas Abney Primary School was awarded the excellence for road safety prize.

Separately, STARS Europe (Sustainable Travel Accreditation and Recognition for Schools) saw 26 primaries and four secondaries in Hackney – nearly a third of all borough schools – gain bronze, silver and gold accreditation, thanks to initiatives which aim to increase the number of pupils walking and cycling to and from school who had previously travelled by car.

STARS Europe, active in Hackney for the past two years, is a joint project with eight other European cities, and aims for a five per cent shift from car-use to walking or cycling

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods and Sustainability, said: "I would like to congratulate all the schools who won awards and achieved accreditation for helping make Hackney a cleaner, greener and safer borough in which to travel."

“The award demonstrates our commitment to promoting sustainable travel”

News in brief

Life is plastic, it's fantastic

SOME 15 million plastic bottles are thrown away in Britain every single day, despite the fact they can be recycled into a range of surprising items.

To tackle this, 'Pledge 4 Plastics' – a national initiative aiming to boost recycling levels – has released a short animated video revealing the 'secret lives' of plastics after being recycled.

Alongside plastic bottles, the animation places a strong emphasis on plastic tubs, pots and trays. In Hackney, these items have the lowest 'capture rate' of all recyclable materials. Some 4,800 tonnes are thrown away every year instead of being recycled.

The animation shows a family recycling common place plastics as they go about their day, with the items making unexpected transformations. For example, Dad starts his recycling journey in the bathroom, where a shampoo bottle becomes a plastic chair.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Hackney currently recycles about 25 per cent of all its waste, but the majority of the rest thrown away by residents could also be recycled. We want people to think a little further than the kitchen and recycle items from other rooms."

Pembury Estate residents stay in the loop with new upcycling service

To me, to you: The Loop Reuse Hub upskills residents on Pembury Estate and allows them to furnish their homes cheaply

AN innovative new 'reuse hub' has arrived in Hackney, one of just five in London.

The Loop, on the Pembury Estate, E5, aims to tackle the growing issue of fly tipping and to improve the local environment by collecting, refurbishing and redistributing unwanted items from the estate.

Part of the Repurpose project, run by Groundwork London and the London Community Resource Network, the service is free to all of the estate's residents, who can also receive training in DIY and upcycling, helping them to reuse items more effectively.

In Hackney, the scheme is being run in partnership with the Peabody Trust. Its Director of Community Programmes, Veronica Kirwan, said the project was: "A remarkable initiative which not only enables our residents to furnish their homes, but discourages fly-tipping and trains our volunteers in useful skills."

The Loop accepts wooden furniture, clean sofas and working white goods. It also has a free doorstep collection service, so local residents can donate their unwanted items. Once restored, these will be sold on at a reasonable price.

For more info, visit: www.theloops.london
To arrange a collection, e-mail: pembury.reuse@groundwork.org.uk

Christmas Past at the Geffrye

Until 3 January, 136 Kingsland Road, E2 8EA

WHAT did Christmas look like before online shopping and supermarket Santa's grottos?

The Geffrye Museum's annual celebration of Christmas through the ages sees its period living rooms decked in authentic garlands and lighting to illustrate our evolving obsession with the festive season over the past 400 years.

'Christmas Past: 400 Years of Seasonal Traditions in English Homes' has been staged at the museum for over 25 years, and the Geffrye's own, on-going research into historic celebrations adds new dimensions to the displays each year.

Did you know, for example, that Christmas was banned in the mid-17th century by a Puritan parliament which disapproved of its excessive eating, drinking and gambling? Or that customary games of charades originate from early 19th century celebrations?

Pick up more festive facts, along with seasonal workshops, talks, and a concert by candlelight at the museum.

REVIEW

Jack and the Beanstalk

Until 3 Jan, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare Street, E8 1EJ

FEE, fi, fo, FUN! Hackney's panto is number one. This year's festive treat 'Jack and the Beanstalk' is on a giant scale: big personalities, vast voices and colossal skirts. It is the winter of discontent: Hackney Dale has been plunged into a frozen world – both economically and literally – for 15 years. Worrying reports from Channel 4's Jon Snow and the BBC's Robert Peston (yes, really!) are screened across the auditorium, warning of more cuts, misery and cold. Sounds familiar?

Luckily for all involved, Mother Nature (played charmingly by Julia Sutton) knows what lies at the root of this hardship – the Giant Blundebore is angry and needs someone 'with a big heart' to talk sense into him before it is too late...

This is where Jack (Debbie Kurup) and his gang – the Snowman (Kat B), Clumsy Colin (Darren Hart) and Off Her Trolley Molly (Georgia Oldman) – come in. They have been chosen to save Hackney Dale from the big freeze gripping the land.

Jack's widowed mother is none other than the fabulous Clive Rowe – who returns to Hackney for the second year running – as the grande panto dame Daisy Trott. Rowe steals the show. He has the unique ability to connect with both adults and children, and a voice as big as his skirts. Throughout Susie McKenna's slick production, the cast are full of beans, belting out a mixture of well-known pop songs to keep everyone bopping in their seats, and some catchy original numbers by Steven Edis. The second half of the play is where most of the action takes place: a series of slapstick mishaps occur, which the children in the audience love, as well as enough double entendres and one-liners to keep adults amused too.

In the year the Empire was voted London's 'most welcoming theatre', we just want to say: Hackney Empire, we're behind you!

PREVIEW

Spitalfields Music Winter Festival

4-15 December, various East London venues

THE Spitalfields Music Festival is something of a misnomer. The event encompasses 12 days of film screenings, historic walks, workshops and dining events alongside its programme of live music.

Neither is the action confined to Spitalfields. This year, the festival is taking over some of East London's most magical spaces, many of them in Hackney.

Hotly anticipated highlights include an opening night concert at Shoreditch Church by the viol consort Fretwork and vocal ensemble Red Byrd. Through a series of 'sound portraits', it promises to bring 16th-century London to life with bawdy songs and street sounds (pictured).

Spitalfields Music's flagship series for babies and toddlers is returning to Rich Mix on 4 and 5 December. Musical Rumpus is an interactive, multisensory performance, featuring live music for the under-threes. Their latest show, Lyrebird features original music by the company's musical director, Sam Glazier, and librettist Zoe Palmer. Back at Shoreditch Church, you can catch The Marion Consort on 14 December.

This young, dynamic and internationally renowned vocal ensemble specialise in early music.

The small instrumental ensemble Solomon's Knot Baroque Collective, meanwhile, will make their festival debut fresh from their sold-out operatic show at Wilton's Music Hall. On 15 December they are closing the programme at Shoreditch Church with a performance of Bach's Christmas Oratorio. 1. Millfields Community School pupils tap in on the special 'beat box'; 2. Millfields win the competition; 3. Baden Powell School come second

Beating the street

A HACKNEY school has won £1,500 and praise for its part in making East London 'a healthier place'.

Millfields Community School, E5, came first in the Beat the Street competition that involved 22,969 people in Hackney, Newham, Waltham Forest and Tower Hamlets walking and cycling a total of 103,958 miles. Special 'beat boxes' were placed around the boroughs, for competitors to tap in and record the distances they covered.

Millfields students racked

“The children have been walking more and encouraging their families to walk more”

up 3,597 miles during the challenge, making them overall winners.

Heidi Caccioppoli, Senior Administration Officer at Millfields, said: “The children have loved participating in Beat the Street. Many were seen riding their bikes and scooters around Hackney and Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park on the weekends trying to tap as many boxes as possible.

“They have also enjoyed competing with each other. The children have definitely been walking more and encouraging their families to walk more as well.”

Millfields was awarded with a trophy and cheque for £1,000, as well as an additional £500 for coming second on the average points leaderboard.

Baden Powell School, also in Hackney, won £500 for coming second on the overall leaderboard.

The competition was organised by the National Charity Partnership, an initiative between Diabetes UK, BHF and Tesco to help millions of people eat better and get active, reducing the risk of serious ill-health.

Jenna Hall, Programme Director, said: “We hope everyone will now be enthused to carry on walking, cycling or taking part in the other physical activities the area has.”

News in brief

Hackney teenager represents England in debating contest

A HACKNEY teenager has become only the fourth state school pupil ever to be selected to represent England in an international debating competition.

Ife Grillo, a student at The Bridge Academy, E2, has been announced as one of five teens who will compete for their country at the World Schools Debating Championships next summer.

He joins teammates from prestigious private schools Eton, Dulwich, Alleyn's and Westminster.

Ife, however, starting debating through a charity called Debate Mate which works in underprivileged areas around the UK to close the attainment gap between state and privately educated students.

Ife, a former member of Hackney Youth Parliament, said he fell in love with debating because it makes you consider arguments from different angles. He said:

“When you are forced to debate things you may not agree with, you have to begin to understand why other people hold different views from you. I think it's helped me become a much more socially conscious person.”

The five young debaters now face six months of training sessions before flying to Stuttgart, Germany, in July to compete against students from around the world.

Ife added: “I was shocked to find out I made the England Team. I've been debating for so long and it feels great to be recognised for it.”

Hackney charity asks for children's books to create new library in Zambia

A HACKNEY charity hopes to open a library in Zambia, filled with books donated by local children.

Since 2006, the Book Bus has taken over 90,000 books to children in Ecuador, Malawi and Zambia. Its latest library is due to open at the start of next year, but the charity has a shortage of pre-school and picture books for children under six. It is therefore calling on the borough's primary schools for help.

To join the 'Christmas Book Drop for Zambia' campaign, schools simply fill a big box with books that are in a good condition. The charity will collect the donations before the Christmas holidays and send them to Zambia.

Head of International Development at the Book Bus, Marian Forkin, said:

“It would be fantastic if the generous children of Hackney can help share their books with the children of Zambia. Being able to read is a human right, but its difficult to learn how to read if you don't have any books.”

For more info, or to donate, visit: www.thebookbus.org; or call: 020 8099 9280.

Hackney plays it right

THE borough's facilities for young people has won praise at the London Adventure Play Awards.

Some 120 children from adventure playgrounds, schools and play streets across London gathered at the Prince Charles Cinema in the West End on 28 October, to hear Hackney Marsh Adventure Playground named '2015 London Adventure Playground of the Year'.

Melian Mansfield, chair of London Play, the charity behind the awards, said: “With a quarter of London’s children living in overcrowded homes, and one in five overweight or obese, space and opportunity to play is vital.

“Playgrounds like Hackney Marsh are doing a fantastic job with few resources”

“Playgrounds like Hackney Marsh are doing a fantastic job with few resources. We hope that these awards make more people understand how valuable these places are and act to protect them.”

Anisa, nine, agreed that Hackney Marsh was a special place. She said: “You get to be as creative as you want, you can make new friends, there is plenty to do, and you can never be tired of doing it.”

The award will mean a new structure for the playground, designed and built by London-based firm Adventure Playground Engineers with the help of local children, and £500 worth of free materials.

There was more celebration as Whiston Road, in Haggerston, was named joint ‘London Play Street of the Year’ along with Islington’s Fairbridge Road. Each road won £250 to fund an on-street celebration.

Big profits for young Hackney market traders in Ridley Road

By Dila Tumer

AN EDUCATIONAL enterprise challenge gave would-be market traders from Hackney the chance to gain an insight into business.

A group of 10 to 13-year-olds, working with charity MyBnk and hosted by IntoUniversity, took their ideas from the planning stage to securing finance via an interest-free micro loan, to getting a stall at Ridley Road Market up and running in four days.

They produced their own Halloween-themed t-shirts and masks and offered a spooky face painting service. The students were able to use their new skills to make a 100 per cent profit from an £80 loan.

Doga Erten, 12, said: “I think we should do it again because I had so much fun.”

Experts from education charity MyBnk taught the young people how to design and market products, write business plans and control budgets.

Lucy Manders, Senior Education Worker at Into University, said: “I thought it was excellent. It teaches young people not only about business, but also about teamwork, determination and confidence.”

Lilly Lappena, Co-CEO of MyBnk, added: “Young people not only learnt vital employability skills, they used their new business smarts to make big profits.”

The project was funded by the Big Lottery. For more info, or to book a workshop, e-mail: declan@mybnk.org; or call: 020 7377 8770.

Young designers celebrate creating historic gowns

By Dila Tumer

ASPIRING designers saw their creations come to life at an exhibition at the London College of Fashion, in Mare Street, on 14 November.

A dozen young designers joined a 10-week course to create two gowns inspired by clothing from the 1800s, which then went on display. The costume making course also included talks on the history of muslin.

The Jamdani Project, a collaborative effort between the college and charity Muslin Trust, was set up in 2013 with the aim of promoting and protecting Bangladeshi heritage fabrics. The finest muslin, from that region, was made from a variety of cotton, which is now believed to be extinct.

Participant Tayeb Grace said: “I really enjoyed the course, met lots of interesting people and learnt that the back stitch is the most secure stitch.”

Saif Osmani, Creative Director of Muslin Trust, added: “It’s great to see real talent shine through from the collective effort of all the young students. The garments look really amazing. We have already had some interest to show them around London and in Asia.”

The Dementia Friendly Swimming Project was launched at Clissold Leisure Centre earlier this month; swimmers Helen O'Malley and Annie Mangion

Swim with dementia

An award-winning project that helps people living with dementia enjoy the benefits of swimming has launched in Hackney.

The Dementia Friendly Swimming Project, which was piloted in Durham and Manchester, opened on 19 November in Clissold Leisure Centre.

Swimming helps reduce anxiety by clearing the mind and relaxing the body. It also offers important opportunities for people to socialise, reducing feelings of loneliness and isolation.

The expansion of the project, which has been recognised at the Alzheimer's Society Dementia Awards 2015 and the Spirit of Manchester Awards, was launched at the Clissold pool with Sports Minister Tracey Crouch; Cllr Jonathan McShane, Hackney's Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care

“Over the next two years we want to create a network of over 100 dementia-friendly pools that are safe and welcoming”

The government hopes to create over 100 dementia-friendly pools and Culture; as well as representatives from the ASA (Amateur Swimming Association) and Alzheimer's Society.

Cllr McShane said: “This is an excellent initiative for people in Hackney that will see individuals presented with a new way to boost mental wellbeing, while fulfilling an activity that can bring with it a real sense of achievement.”

Dementia is one of the key health challenges facing society today, with around 670,000 people in England living with dementia, and an estimated 550,000 carers.

Adam Paker, Chief Executive of the ASA, said: “Over the next two years we want to create a network of over 100 dementia-friendly pools that are safe and welcoming for all, ensuring that no one living with dementia misses out on being able to enjoy swimming and the many health and social benefits that it offers.”

Research shows that low-impact exercise can help to improve the quality of life for people in all stages of dementia, and that swimming in particular has the added benefits of helping to reduce anxiety, improve a person's mood and offers an overall sense of physical and mental well-being.

The three-year project is supported by the Department of Health's Innovation, Excellence and Strategic Development Fund, which aims to create a network of more than 100 dementia-friendly pools.

Film about cerebral palsy made by young residents

A GROUND-breaking short film, which was made in Hackney and explores life with cerebral palsy, has been released with a premiere in the borough.

The eight-minute film called 'Cerebral People' features teenagers explaining, in their own words, their experiences of the condition and their hopes for the future. It was made through a project run by the physiotherapy and occupational therapy departments at Hackney Ark, a centre for children and young people with special needs and disabilities.

Catherine Lomas, a physiotherapist at the centre, explained: “The young people were encouraged to take part in different exercises and to create content to communicate their thoughts and explore their diagnosis.” The red carpet screening was held at Headway East London on 19 November and the film is now available to view online. # Fire, fire! Pour on water

By Rebecca Odell

BEFORE electricity became common place in homes, fire was a deadly threat. People depended on it for heating, cooking and lighting. But accidents frequently occurred, endangering both lives and property.

Hackney's first fire engine was purchased in 1708. Financed by a property tax, the fire station was in the grounds of St Augustine's Church, off the Narrow Way. One of these early fire engines, or 'parish pumps', is displayed in Hackney Museum.

A classic example of 18th to early 19th century fire engines, it was manually pushed to a blaze and filled with water from nearby sources using leather buckets. A team of men had to push the long wooden handles on either side up and down to pump the water out. A leather hose on top directed the resulting jet of water onto the flames.

Mid 19th century fire-fighting arrangements were chaotic. Dalston resident Charles Clarke wrote: "When a fire first broke out the first thing one did was to send out numerous expeditions in search of the firemen. If they happened to be at home it was considered a marvellous piece of good fortune."

These firemen were Mr Williams and Mr Edwards, an officer of West Hackney Church and a shoemaker. Their full-time jobs meant they were off on business around the borough, so a reward of a shilling was offered to whoever managed to find them. With so much precious time being lost, houses were often almost destroyed before help arrived.

“When a fire first broke out the first thing one did was to send out numerous expeditions in search of the firemen”

Though primitive, parish pumps continued to be used for a long time; the example in Hackney Museum was maintained into the 1850s. The two churchwardens named on the side show it was still being used in 1867. This was two years after the creation of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade and the start of today's London fire service.

They were eventually replaced in Hackney by horse-drawn engines. When an alarm was raised firemen would take the first horse from a taxi to pull the engine to the fire. Very often however, horses refused to move, and firemen had to continue down the road testing each horse, until one obedient enough was found. Meanwhile, Charles Clarke wrote, the abandoned taxi would attract gangs of small boys. "When the doors have been almost wrenched off their hinges and the wheels wrenched off their axles there would come a warning shout from a boy scout,

'here she comes', and the rest of the small boys would vanish... Truly, in those days, fires were nothing but 'great larks'."

Despite this, by 1882 Hackney parish brigade would become famous as the best in London. They had up-to-date equipment; five first rate, modern, two horse engines, complete with all the latest appliances, and the borough also rented two fire escapes from the Fire Escape Society. The service now had nine men, including a full-time chief and deputy who had previously been in the Metropolitan Brigade.

The service was praised by several witnesses at a parliamentary hearing and other parishes were sent to Hackney to learn what they should be doing.

One church officer boasted: "I do not think there is any parish in London better supplied."

Shoreditch, by contrast, is recorded as having 'one good engine and one good man'. Stoke Newington was such a small parish they could not finance their own engine, and had to make use of Hackney's engine on the boundary of Abney Park cemetery, for a fee.

Despite the existence of a publicly funded London brigade, Hackney was reluctant to give up its local system. Of 145 fires between 1875 and 1882, 103 were still handled by parish firemen.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sade Etti.

THIS warming recipe for a Peruvian twist on porridge comes from Andina, located on the corner of Redchurch Street and Shoreditch High Street, E2.

Ingredients

- 70g cooked quinoa
- 40g cooked amaranth (a grain)
- 4 tbsp honey
- 1/2 cup quinoa milk
- 4 strawberries
- 10 blueberries
- 5 goldenberries
- 1 fig

Method

- Bored of your usual breakfast? This is the antidote. Rinse the quinoa and amaranth with water and drain. Mix the grains together with the quinoa milk and half the honey. Gently boil for 10 minutes until creamy
- Serve with the chopped fruits on top and drizzle the remaining honey.

Quinoa is a very good source of calcium, magnesium and manganese. It also possesses good levels of several B vitamins, vitamin E and dietary fibre. Another South American super-grain, amaranth is rich in lysine, an amino acid which boosts energy levels and is packed full with potassium and zinc to keep you going all day.

Reminder to have your say on safeguarding adults

THE City and Hackney Safeguarding Adults Board is reminding residents to have their say on its proposed five year plan.

The board's vision is to ensure that people live a life free from harm in communities that are intolerant of abuse, work together to prevent abuse, and know what to do when it happens.

As a multi-agency partnership of organisations working in the two boroughs, the board has developed a new strategy to help realise this vision. The strategy is underpinned by four principles to help organisations work together with adults who are not able to protect themselves from abuse and neglect because of their care needs.
